Dean of Education Arthur M. Horne

Associate Dean for Academic Programs

Jim Marshall

This office handles four major areas within the College: assessment and accreditation, curriculum processes, international initiatives, and student affairs. Specifically, the office oversees the College's overall performance-based assessment system by assisting programs with ongoing national, state, and university program assessment and accreditation efforts, managing the collection of information for various College reports, and working with external bodies including the Professional Standards Commission and Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia. This office also facilitates curricular changes within the College, serves in a coordinating role with the College's international efforts, and oversees the Student Services Office.

Associate Dean for Faculty & Finance

Cheri Hoy

This office handles the day-to-day operation of the College and also serves as the initial point of contact for requests from central administration and department heads regarding college issues and funding matters. Oversight of Faculty Services, the Business Office, and COE participation at the Gwinnett University Center falls under this office. This office is responsible for preparing and presenting budget reports to the Provost, faculty employment issues such as promotion and post-tenure reviews, ensuring appropriate policies and guidelines are in place, and representing the Dean at functions and meetings when he is unavailable.

Associate Dean for Outreach & Engagement

Ronald Cevero

The office's efforts connect our faculty, staff and students to the larger community, its schools, neighborhoods and families. Our initiatives build relationships and provide individuals' access to our pre-service, graduate and professional development programs.

Our engagement efforts build partnerships and become entrepreneurial in bringing new resources and collaborators together. We identify the needs of schools, workplaces and communities striving to bring theory and practice together.

We are committed to translating what we learn through research and what we teach in the classroom into the daily lives of citizens across Georgia and around the world.

Associate Dean for Research

Noel Gregg

Researchers at the University of Georgia's College of Education are at the forefront of asking questions and posing innovative solutions to some of the most challenging questions facing educators, counselors and health professionals today. To help facilitate this work, the research office connects with other units throughout the University of Georgia, including the Office of the Vice President for Research, Sponsored Programs, and other fiscal and administrative units relevant to grant and contract management.

We are committed to strengthening an environment that supports collaborative inquiry inclusive of all members of the research community. Resources provide support to faculty and students involved in the implementation, and production of research using the breadth of theoretical perspectives and research methodologies across disciplines. Our efforts help build partnerships which focus on translating this research into practice for education, work, and communities throughout Georgia, the nation, and the world.
