

Shaping the NATIONAL POLICY on education

*An interview with NRC program director
Michael J. Feuer on the future of education research and policy, and other matters*

A close-up, profile view of Michael J. Feuer, a middle-aged man with dark hair, wearing a dark suit jacket over a light blue collared shirt. He is looking slightly to the right of the frame.

Michael J. Feuer, a leading education research and policy analyst, is executive director of the Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education at the National Research Council of the National Academy of Sciences in Washington, D.C. He has promoted the intersection of education research and policy throughout his career, addressing issues ranging from educational technology, testing and performance standards to institutional economics.

The following interview was conducted by Elizabeth A. St.Pierre, a UGA professor of language and literacy education, in late spring 2006. Part II of the interview can be seen on coeNEWS at www.uga.edu/coenews.

PHOTOS BY ROBERT NEWCOMB