Deb Teitelbaum, a Ph.D. student in Educational Administration & Policy, received 3rd place in the College of Education's Graduate Research Conference for her qualitative study, You Gotta Shake Your Own Bushes: Why Good Teachers Leave Teaching. Deb's research centers on teacher job satisfaction and retention and how supervision may be used to enhance both. Deb presented this research paper at the American Educational Research Association conference in New York earlier in April, 2008.
